Sheila (Stuhlbarǵ) Johnstone

Class of 1959

“Enthusiastic, generous, tireless worker and Renaissance woman,” are just some of the words used to describe Sheila (Stuhlbarǵ) Johnstone.

For 20 years she served on the faculties of the Washington University Medical School and the University of Miami Medical School in Miami, Fla. as a research scientist. Her work on the collegiate level resulted in Johnstone branching out as a Medical/Legal Research Consultant and later starting her own business, Sheila Kay Johnstone, Inc. Her company advises law firms nationwide on medical related legal issues. Additionally, Johnstone teaches at the University of Houston Law School and serves on the board of its Health/Law Policy Institute.

Johnstone has co-authored two cookbooks. She is also a former dancer, fashion designer and magazine fashion editor.

However, Johnstone is most proud of using her proficiency in American Sign Language to teach English to deaf students and performing nationally as a duo pianist for the past 20 years. Her musical recordings, one of which is housed permanently in the George H. Bush presidential library, are often heard on National Public Radio.
